

A Letter to Dad

A Persuasive Letter by: Jonathan Lau (WE1) Wah Yan College

Dear dad,

Did you know that 100% of students in my school want to get an iPhone 5 for free? Everybody in my school is clever and sensible, and chooses the best thing to use.

The iPhone 5 is the newest version of the iPhone, and I want it jailbroken. Its screen is longer and it is easier to poke the button that I want to poke. When I keep poking where I want to poke and nothing happens, I will get angry and vent my anger on something.

Also, if I have an iPhone 5, my place in my class will be higher, and I will be respected more, bullied less and be less isolated. Once, after school, my mother called me. I took out my phone and my schoolmates said that I was outdated and isolated me for one day. Just imagine nobody talking to you for a day.

Having an iPhone, I can check email, Facebook, surf the Internet without turning on a computer. This could save a lot of time, no need to wait for the computer to turn on for five minutes, and then turn off for five minutes. In those ten minutes, I can finish some homework, play some games, eat some snacks, go to the toilet, all kinds of meaningful things to do without staring at the computer for ten minutes.

I also want the phone to have infinite wifi, so that I can check WhatsApp, Facebook in the MTR to save time, rather than poking on my iPod Touch for half an hour at home. With an iPhone 5, my phone, my iPod Touch, my computer, my calculator, my watch, my alarm clock, and all sorts of things are combined together in one single gadget.

With an infinite usage of wifi, I can also play games such as Defender, Minecraft, Clash of Clans, Destroy Gunners Z, and so on. I need to play games because I need recreation. My school life is now full of stress. If I do not play games, I may fall asleep while doing my homework. Also, some games need newer versions of the iPhone.

Having a jailbroken phone allows you to change the font and the display effects of the homescreen and the screen when locked. It will be more pleasing to the eye.

Having an iPhone 5, I can take out my phone whenever and wherever I want, not afraid of being laughed at. I can call you when I have time and you will know where I am. This can make you less worried about me.

Yours faithfully,

Jonathan
